

A detailed photograph of a common frog (Knoblauchkröte) resting on a large, green lily pad. The frog has a mottled pattern of brown, black, and white spots on its back and legs. Its eyes are large and prominent, with a golden-brown iris. To the left of the frog, a cluster of small, white, spherical frog eggs is visible on the lily pad. The background shows more lily pads and the dark water of a pond.

*Wie rettet man
eine Knoblauchkröte?*

blaues-wunder-berlin.de